What would you do if:

• A student needs extra time to complete an exam because she says she suffers from an anxiety disorder?

• An employee asks for special consideration because he is “disabled,” even though his cancer is in remission?

Changes to the American Disability Act (ADA), effective Jan. 1, 2009, offer greater protection for persons with disabilities and significantly broaden the scope of what constitutes a disability. This seminar is designed to help Creighton students, faculty and staff understand their rights.

Sponsored by the American Disabilities Act Committee at Creighton University, this event is offered at no cost. Registration is not required, however individuals who do register by March 16 will receive a light lunch. To register, call or e-mail Deb McAtee at 280.2792 or dmcatee@creighton.edu.
