'Harvey' shows acting group is in good hands

By Cary Pfeffer

The Department of Fine and Performing Arts has three new faculty members this semester. And if the play “Harvey” is an indication, the department’s theatre program is in good hands.

“Harvey” will be presented tonight through Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Eppley Business Administration Building’s Little Theatre.

Review

“Harvey” is typical of Creighton plays because it is a mixture of experienced actors and new people.

Probably one of the best performances, judging by recent dress rehearsals, is by Florence Corbin, a former secretary at Creighton. Her enthusiasm has encouraged the entire cast, Arts senior Gail Carrideo said.

Corbin rushes about the stage as the nervous sister of unshakeable Elwood P. Dowd, friendly drunk and companion of the 6 foot 2 inch Harvey.

Of course Elwood’s companion is not only tall, he is also an invisible rabbit.

Director Bill Hutson said he believes high quality productions will bring more theatre majors to the department. Hutson said he is encouraged by the “Harvey” cast. “I’m impressed with the actors at Creighton, both theatre majors and the others,” he said.

“The medical aspects of “Harvey” also make it interesting . . . bits and mannerisms have been picked up by the cast from their individual experice with the professions,” Hutson said.

Dr. Chumley’s character is convincingly handled by Medical sophomore Kenneth Haller.

Arts junior Mike McCandless is an entertaining Elwood P. Dowd, at home in the old-fashioned set decor.

As for the rabbit, if the cast and technical director Jamie Mason put things together correctly, Harvey will be noticeably present.

Tickets can be reserved (449-2509) or purchased at the door.

Ticket prices are $1 for Creighton students, faculty, administrators and staff; $1.50 for other students and $2 for the public.

Traditional Mass will open reunion

By Cary Pfeffer

The Department of Fine and Performing Arts has three new faculty members this semester. And if the play “Harvey” is an indication, the department’s theatre program is in good hands.

“Harvey” will be presented tonight through Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Eppley Business Administration Building’s Little Theatre.

Review

“Harvey” is typical of Creighton plays because it is a mixture of experienced actors and new people.

Probably one of the best performances, judging
by recent dress rehearsals, is by Florence Corbin, a former secretary at Creighton. Her enthusiasm has encouraged the entire cast, Arts senior Gail Carrideo
said.

Corbin rushes about the stage as the nervous sister of unshakeable Elwood P. Dowd, friendly drunk and companion of the 6 foot 2 inch Harvey.

Of course Elwood’s companion is not only tall,
he is also an invisible rabbit.

Director Bill Hutson said he believes high quality productions will bring more theatre majors to the department. Hutson said he is encouraged by the “Harvey” cast. “I’m impressed with the actors at Creighton, both theatre majors and the others,” he said.

“The medical aspects of “Harvey” also make it interesting . . . bits and mannerisms have been picked up by the cast from their individual experi-
ce with the professions,” Hutson said.

Dr. Chumley’s character is convincingly handled
by Medical sophomore Kenneth Haller.

Arts junior Mike McCandless is an entertaining Elwood P. Dowd, at home in the old-fashioned set decor.

As for the rabbit, if the cast and technical director Jamie Mason put things together correctly, Harvey will be noticeably present.

Tickets can be reserved (449-2509) or purchased
at the door.

Ticket prices are $1 for Creighton students, faculty, administrators and staff; $1.50 for other students and $2 for the public.