Art fair coaxes creativity

Even amid the gusts of last Thursday, students and faculty members came out to display their creativity at the Arts Fair, sponsored by the Arts Senate.

Above, Arts senior Peggy Reihecke puts some finishing touches on a mixed-media mural. At the right, workmen fasten the railroad ties used in Fr. Lee Lubbers’ teepee. The ties were dug up from under California Street during construction of the piazza.

In the lower right, Arts freshman Young Chun; Arts sophomore Dianna Wong; Arts sophomore Don Emarine and John Thein, assistant professor of fine arts, pull a print from a cardboard block. Below, Jerry Horning, assistant professor of fine arts, demonstrates raku, a pottery firing process, and Arts senior Tom D’Augusta works on a mural.

Photos by Brooke Ann Benschoter