A retrospective of the work of Robert Bosco opened Wednesday and will run through Nov. 17 in the Fine Arts Gallery.

Bosco, an assistant professor of fine and performing arts, has been teaching painting and drawing at Creighton the last nine years. He was most recently honored when a painting of his was selected from 1,200 entries to be included in the exhibition Alternatives 85 that is currently touring the United States.

Both realistic and abstract works are featured in the show.
