Klem picks new spring play

The originally scheduled spring play, “Beyond Therapy,” has been replaced by “What the Butler Saw,” a play written by the late Joe Orton.

Bill Hutson, director of numerous plays while teaching at Creighton, had scheduled “Beyond Therapy” as the spring play, but a change in faculty brought about a change in plays.

Alan Klem, fine arts instructor and the director for the spring play, said, “I wanted to work with something I enjoyed more.” Although he hasn’t directed this particular play before, Klem said he has found more enjoyment from “What the Butler Saw.”

“What the Butler Saw” is a satire dealing with the psychiatric profession.

Klem will be seeking two women and four men to fill the six roles in the play. Auditions will be held March 17-18.
