The surviving soldier’s relationship with his son unfolds in the following scenes as he reconciles with the trauma.

Creighton professor of Sociology Dr. David Lopez wrote the play as a tribute to his father, a highly decorated soldier who could not eat at an American restaurant because he was Mexican.

“I hope that this will educate and enlighten people on the contributions in the face of struggle and adversity that people of Mexican descent have made,” Lopez said.

Details make this storyline a success.

The loose ends are tied and the characters open avenues that reach male and female, young and old.

Zachariah Barrientos plays Dr. Daniel Salez, who recognizes the distance between he and his father.

“Everything I said on stage, I went through,” Barrientos said.

The show runs April 29—May 16, Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., Sunday at 6 p.m. Admission is $6 for students.

Contact this reporter at nancyskie@creighton.edu