The University Research Council in collaboration with University Relations is launching the Creighton University Interdisciplinary Conversations (CUIC). CUIC is an opportunity for faculty to come together and discuss topics that lend themselves to interdisciplinary collaboration.

We know that Creighton has a unique opportunity as a modestly small yet diverse campus to engage in this interdisciplinary conversation and networking opportunity. Our next CUIC is:

Sustainability at Creighton

Please join Ms. Mary Duda, Dr. John O’Keefe, Dr. Barbara Dilly, Dr. Richard Miller and others to learn more about Creighton’s Climate Action Plan (CAP) and how you can help implement the plan.

In January 2010, Fr. John Schlegel signed the American College and University Presidents’ Climate Commitment (ACUPCC). Part of this commitment is to develop an institutional action plan for becoming climate neutral. Creighton’s climate action plan (CAP) is due May 15, 2013 to the ACUPCC.

The university has engaged the Brendle Group to conduct the planning with input from the Creighton community. The goal is to develop strategies to reduce the university’s carbon emissions and to set a date for climate neutrality. The process was kicked off last summer with a brainstorming session and several meetings through the fall. The CAP is currently at 90%. A draft of the document, along with more background information, can be found here
