A New Look for EBSCOhost; WebSPIRS Retired

EBSCOhost is the provider of some of the more heavily-used health sciences databases, including MEDLINE and CINAHL. When accessing databases, users will notice EBSCOhost’s new interface, EBSCOhost 2.0. While retaining the functionality of the previous version, EBSCOhost 2.0 introduces several new features, including a new organization of search limiters and expanders. For an overview of EBSCOhost 2.0, view this Introduction to EBSCOhost 2.0 (get Flash, if necessary).

Another database provider, WebSPIRS, is no longer available. The Health Sciences Library has migrated the databases that were provided via WebSPIRS to other vendor’s interfaces. MEDLINE (also available via PubMed) and IPA are now available via EBSCOhost. Drug Information Fulltext contained the full text of AHFS; this is now available via Lexi-Comp Online with AHFS. Reactions is now available via OVID.

Please contact the Health Sciences Library Reference Department (280-5138, refdesk@creighton.edu, or IM name = cuhsrefdesk) with any questions or comments.

RefWorks: Enhancements, Upgrades – and RefAware

RefWorks, the web-based personal bibliographic database manager available to Creighton faculty, students, and staff at no cost to the individual user, announced some recent enhancements to their product. In addition, a new RefWorks product – RefAware – is now available to the Creighton community.

Write-N-Cite III for Windows

Write-N-Cite III for Windows is now available to RefWorks users. What are some of the improvements in WNC III for Windows?

- faster processing of larger documents
- single-document formatting (a FINAL- document will not be created with this version)
- ability to work on a paper and format a bibliography offline

In addition, users will be able to take documents created with a previous version of WNC and make it compatible with WNC III for Windows; conversely, users will be able to take a WNC III for Windows document and revert the document to a WNC version 2.0 document.

Write-N-Cite (WNC) III for Windows requires Internet Explorer 6 or higher and is compatible with Windows XP or later (including Vista) and Microsoft Word 2003 or later. Also available is a new Write-N-Cite version for Macs – Write-N-Cite for Mac v.2.5. This version for Macs will address users of Mac OS 10.5 and Microsoft Word for Mac 2008.

The Health Sciences Library will increase hours of operation and open earlier beginning with the Fall Semester. On August 18, the HSL will open at 7 a.m. Monday – Friday.

The library will be open 105 hours a week. This compares favorably with other academic health sciences libraries around the country. (The national average of operation is 98 hours per week.)

The Health Sciences Library continues to strive to create a comfortable space for study, research, small group collaboration, and reflection.

Attachments Feature

The RefWorks Attachment Feature allows users to attach non-bibliographic information to their references, much like attaching files to an e-mail message. A variety of files may be uploaded to an existing RefWorks record, including PDF, JPG, TIF, and GIF files. Each RefWorks user has a maximum of 200 MB of storage space per account. While there is no limitation on the number of attachments allowed per account or per record, a maximum size of 20 MB per attachment exists.

To utilize this feature, simply click on the Edit option of a RefWorks record, browse, and attach the appropriate file to the record.

RefAware

RefAware, a web-based current awareness service designed and created by RefWorks to provide researchers with immediate access to new research and publications in their respective fields, is now available to Creighton users. RefAware allows the creation of up to thirty (30) distinct search queries consisting of key terms, authors, and/or journals of interest. Based upon the search queries created, RefAware alerts the researcher when new articles are available. Once alerted to this new information, users may then export the new information into a variety of bibliographic management software programs (including, of course, RefWorks). Create a RefAware account and login to RefAware from the RefWorks page of the Health Sciences Library website.

For a complete listing of RefWorks and RefAware workshops (as well as other workshops), please see page 4. For more information about RefWorks or RefAware, contact the Health Sciences Library Reference Desk (280-5138, refdesk@creighton.edu, or IM name = cuhslrefdesk) or John Mitchell, Reference Librarian (280-4127 or jmitchell@creighton.edu).
Health Sciences Library Expands eBook Collection

New NetLibrary eBooks Now Available

The Health Sciences Library has purchased 132 titles from OCLC’s Medical Core eBook Collection. NetLibrary’s medical ebooks collection consists of titles in health-related disciplines that have been selected from the Doody's Core Titles in Health Sciences collection.

NetLibrary’s ebooks consist of titles in health-related disciplines that have been selected from the Doody’s Core Titles in Health Sciences collection.

The Health Sciences Library, in a joint effort with Reinert Alumni Memorial Library, now subscribes to Academic Complete, a growing ebook collection of over 37,000 titles that spans a number of different academic subject areas, including Medicine, Science, Education, Psychology, and Technology. The ebooks come from respected academic and professional publishers from whom the library has previously purchased many items in print format.

[Note: To view electronic books through the ebrary database, you will need to download and install an ebrary Reader for your web browser. Click on the ebrary link on the Resources page (noted below) and locate the ebrary Reader in the Getting Started section of the resulting page.]

To access these collections, visit the Resources page of the HSL website. At the Resources page, scroll down to the General ebooks collection section. All ebooks in these collections may also be accessed via CLIC, Creighton’s online library catalog.

For more information and support for both NetLibrary and ebrary, contact the Health Sciences Library Reference Desk (280-5138, refdesk@creighton.edu or IM name = cuhsrefdesk).

Librarians Have Green Thumb

This spring the Health Sciences Library staff participated in the Creighton University Medical Center’s Adopt-a-Planter program. The program provided funds to purchase plants and a staff member to make sure all the planters were watered; Health Sciences Library staff members planted and made sure there were no weeds.

The HSL staff adopted two planters on the East patio so they could enjoy them and monitor their progress. They are anxiously awaiting the results of the judging (which will be announced this fall).

Thanks to Pat Meeves, Nannette Bedrosky, Amy Grimsley and Judi Bergjord of the Health Sciences Library for assisting in this project.

Creating Direct Links to Journal Articles

Providing links to online journal articles allows the sharing of content protected by copyright without needing to seek permission. (For more information on copyright, see http://www2.creighton.edu/health/library/services/obtaincopyrightpermission/) Links can often be made via Digital Object Identifier (DOI), direct URL, or another path particular to the online provider.

Digital Object Identifier (DOI®): The most persistently accurate way to share, cite, and link to an electronic document is to use a digital object identifier (DOI). A DOI link is preferred even if the URL for the article works; URLs frequently change, but DOIs are permanent. DOIs are provided for many articles in Science Direct, MD Consult, SpringerLink, Wiley-Blackwell Interscience, OVID, and many other online providers. To make a link to an article, append the DOI (the numbers and letters following doi: in the citation) to http://dx.doi.org/. For example, the link to doi:10.1016/j.acra.2008.04.004 is http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.acra.2008.04.004.

URL: When there is no DOI, the easiest way to link to an article is to copy the URL from the bar at the top of the browser. Highwire, MetaPress, Springer, Wiley-Blackwell, and ScienceDirect URLs will usually work (but remember to check for DOIs).

Some online providers use temporary session URLs that won’t work later, so special procedures are needed to link to their articles.

EBSCOhost: Copy the URL in the Persistent Link to this Record (Permalink) field in the full record for the article.

OVID: If no DOI is given, click on Email Jumpstart. Copy the URL that appears in the box at the top of the page labeled Your Jumpstart URL is.

Test your links. Before publishing a link, test it in several web browsers (Internet Explorer, Firefox, Safari, etc.) to make sure it works. It is also useful to test the link on another computer, in case a cookie on your computer is allowing access.

Access to resources licensed by the Library is restricted to current students and employees of Creighton University. Valid users who access online resources from off campus must log in via EZProxy; without authentication, most links will not work.
