As an Environmental Educator, his frequent visits to the Arctic Circle allowed him the privilege of spending time with the Inuit people, learning about their traditions of throat singing, drumming and sculpting. Carlos Velazquez will share stories of his visits to the Inuit and the impact of Global Warming has had on these traditions.

Thursday, April 14 2011
Harper Center Room 3023
11:30 a.m. -1:00 p.m.

As an Environmental Educator, his frequent visits to the Arctic Circle allowed him the privilege of spending time with the Inuit people, learning about their traditions of throat singing, drumming and sculpting. Carlos Velazquez will share stories of his visits to the Inuit and the impact of Global Warming has had on these traditions.