Lecture by author/attorney – Jeffrey Haas “The Assassination of Fred Hampton: How the FBI and Chicago Police Murdered a Black Panther”. On December 4th, 1969, Chicago police raided Fred Hampton’s apartment and shot and killed him in his bed. He was just twenty-one years old. Black Panther Leader Mark Clark was also killed in the Raid. While authorities claimed the Panthers had opened fire on the police who were there to serve a search warrant for weapons, evidence later emerged that told a very different story... (1 Unit)

Waaxe's Law

"Waaxe's Law is a dramatic retelling of the seminal & heartbreaking trial of Chief Standing Bear in Omaha, Nebraska in 1879, during which Judge Dundy became the first judge to declare Native Americans to be "persons" under federal law. Based on quotes found in historical accounts, interviews with elders of both Northern and Southern Ponca tribes, as well as transcripts from the time period surrounding the trial, this play vividly brings to life the historic struggle between understanding and ignorance, compassion and prejudice, and vividly illustrates the challenges that our country faces today in its ongoing struggle for justice in the world." Anthony Rapp

Anthony Rapp is best known for originating the role of "Mark Cohen" in the Tony Award-winning rock opera Rent. Rent explores a struggle with life, love and AIDS, and the impact each has on our society. Rapp shared an OBIE (Off-Broadway) Award with the rest of the cast for the performance. After taking the show from Off-Broadway to Broadway, Chicago to London, Rapp reprised his role in the 2005 Sony Pictures major motion picture adaptation. Rent ended its incredibly successful 12 year Broadway run in September of 2008. Rapp's prolific career includes roles in additional Broadway shows, major motion pictures and several television series. He is back on tour with a performance adapted from his 2006 national best-seller Without You: a Memoir of Love, Loss, and the Musical "Rent". Rapp's novel details his experiences during Rent's original run—as well as his personal struggle with losing his mother to cancer. Rapp also serves on the board of the non-profit organization Friends In Deed, which provides emotional support for anyone with a diagnosis of HIV/AIDS, cancer or other life-threatening physical illnesses, their families, friends and caregivers. At the podium, Rapp takes audiences through his career, the loss of his friend and Rent playwright Jonathan Larson and his mother's battle with cancer. In an insightful exploration of the social importance of the show, Rapp highlights the role Rent played in thrusting LGBT, HIV/AIDS and poverty issues into the national spotlight. (1unit)
