Have you participated or wanted to participate in health research that could improve the lives of many? The Werner Institute at Creighton University will host two, small group discussions to better understand, from your point of view, how patients can best be involved in health research.

Getting involved in research can mean more than being a study subject

If you are at least 19 years old and want to share your experiences, ideas and questions, please join us for a 5:30-7:30 pm discussion on either January 23 or 24, 2012, at Creighton University. You will receive a $50 gift card for your participation. Parking spaces will be arranged.

Oregon Health & Science University, in cooperation with the University Network for Collaborative Governance and the Werner Institute at Creighton University School of Law, is heading this project, funded by the Patient Centered Outcomes Research Institute (PCORI). PCORI is an independent, nonprofit organization created by Congress in 2010 to support research guided by input from patients, caregivers and the broader health care community to produce high-integrity, evidence-based information that improves the overall quality of patient health care and outcomes.

Please contact Anat Cabili at (402) 280-3584 or anatcabili@creighton.edu for more information.