

Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship Award

In recognition of Creighton's long history in the advancement of teaching that has led us from good to reflective teaching, from Ernest Boyer's Teaching as Scholarship to Lee Shulman's Scholarship of Teaching and Learning, we celebrate our Jesuit pedagogical and campus traditions, by announcing the creation of the Creighton University Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship Award in 2013

While Creighton has various teaching awards across campus, this all-University award that recognizes excellence based on "evidence of effective teaching." This University teaching award will allow Creighton to model best practices in scholarly teaching, clearly communicate the valuing of teaching as our core enterprise, and advance our efforts to be more competitive in state and national teaching award programs.

Founders' Week Convocation will recognize the recipient(s) of this award. Rooted in our Carnegie campus conversations of the 1990s and our more recent Scholarship of Teaching and Learning initiatives, this award will mirror current and best practices in evaluating teaching as a scholarly endeavor.

Annually, up to two recipients will be chosen for the award. The recipients of the award must: hold a full-time faculty appointment at the university; must be at least at the rank of Associate Professor; and must show a consistent commitment to the teaching mission and objectives of the University and one's primary appointed department. Eligible faculty should be nominated and submit a personal statement as well as their contributions to teaching and evidence of a body of work as an Educator Scholar.

The award application process is managed by the Teaching and Learning Center.
Important dates and information: Call for Nominations open in September.

Recipients of the Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship Award

2020

No recipients were awarded the Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship Award in 2020.

2019

Lisa Black, DPT, PT, Associate Professor, School of Pharmacy and Health Professions

Mary Ann Danielson, Ph.D., Professor of Communication Studies, College of Arts and Sciences

2018

Maya Khanna, Ph.D., Professor of Psychology, College of Arts and Sciences

Julie Manz, Ph.D., M.S., RN, Associate Professor, College of Nursing

2017

Kimberley J. Begley, PharmD, RPh, Associate Professor, School of Pharmacy and Health Professions

Anne M. Schoening, Ph.D., RN, CNE, Associate Professor, Obstetric Nursing Faculty Development Coordinator, College of Nursing

2016

Jennifer Furze, PT, DPT, PCS, Associate Professor, Department of Physical Therapy, School of Pharmacy and Health Professions

2015

Noam Ebner, LL.M., Associate Professor-Online Program Chair Werner Institute, School of Law

David Reed, Ph.D., Associate Professor and Director of Computer Sciences and Informatics, College of Arts and Sciences

2014

Gintaras Duda, Ph.D. Associate Professor of Physics, College of Arts and Sciences

Naser Zaki Alsharif, Pharm.D., PHD '92, Professor of Pharmacy Sciences, School of Pharmacy and Health Professions

Due to no faculty recipients awarded the Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship Award in 2020. No announcement was made during Founder's Week and no TLC Program in recognition of Teaching as Scholarship program was not held during the month of February either.

Date: February 2020
Attendance: 0

Distinguished Educators in Teaching as Scholarship: Through the Looking Glass: Assessment Development on the National Stage

Date: February 28, 2019
Attendance: 23

Over the course of their academic careers, Dr. Lisa Black (Physical Therapy, School of Pharmacy & Health Professions) and Dr. Mary Ann Danielson (Communication Studies, College of Arts & Sciences), have developed renowned expertise in assessment of their students' learning. They have brought that expertise to national and international stages for faculty around the world to draw upon, thus influencing the learning of thousands of students.

You are invited to hear these national experts share their insights and stories as we celebrate with each of them as the 2019 Distinguished Educators in Teaching as Scholarship recipients. Join our conversation as we address such questions as:

- How did you begin your journey toward expertise in assessment processes? How did you address challenges you faced along the way?
- What lessons did you learn as you sought not only to improve your students' learning, but also to move forward assessment lessons on the national and international levels? How did you maintain your resilience in charting new paths for assessment?
- Even as your scholarly work informs your respective disciplines, what have your students and colleagues taught you about moving forward changes in teaching and learning?

Distinguished Educators in Teaching as Scholarship: Embracing Learning for Life Breakfast

Date: February 23, 2018
Attendance: 25

Jesuit education values "life-long learning," and Creighton University's faculty both embody and promote a "life of learning," for themselves, their students, and our alums. Blending Jesuit values and High Impact Educational Practices, the 2018 Distinguished Educators employ evidence-based practices to ensure students' professional successes. Drs. Julie Manz (College of Nursing) and Maya Khanna (College of Arts and Sciences, Psychology Department) began their teaching careers outside of higher education; these early lessons and a scholarly approach to student learning have informed their curricular innovations and positively impacted their students' professional development and disciplinary activities.

You are invited to hear these national experts share their insights and stories as we celebrate with each of them as the 2018 Distinguished Educators in Teaching as Scholarship recipients. Join our conversation as we discuss teaching pedagogies and student learning and address such questions as:

- How do you respond to colleagues who are challenged by the 'active learning' paradigms, with an emphasis that it takes too much time (away from lecturing)?
- While many consider exams as summative evaluations, your work with exams/assessments of learning has taken a more formative or creative approach. Can you explain what you do and why you consider it more effective in advancing student learning and/or your instructional practices?
- Even as your scholarly work informs your respective disciplines, what have your students and colleagues taught you about active or experiential learning, testing and evaluation, or curricular models?

Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship Luncheon: Applying the MAGIS to Real-Life Learning

Date: February 24, 2017
Attendance: 25

Fr. Daniel Hendrickson, S.J. began his presidency with the message of “I say more,” and our recent marketing to prospective students promises “more than an education.” As the most comprehensive and complex of the 28 Jesuit institutions, Creighton manifests MAGIS in unique and innumerable ways.

You are invited to celebrate with us the two Distinguished Educators—Drs. Kimberley Begley (School of Pharmacy and Health Professions) and Anne Schoening (College of Nursing)—who enable their students’ MAGIS through innovative curricula, evidence improved student learning outcomes, prepare their students for their professional lives, and impact their national disciplines.

Join our conversation as we discuss evidence-based practices and address such questions as:

- How have you built upon Ignatian pedagogical traditions and values to ensure distinctive educational programs that promote students’ academic success and professional excellence?
- What have your students taught you about active, collaborative learning and how can that inform faculty’s curriculum development and pedagogies?
- Interprofessional Education is a growing national movement; given your experiences, how do you see IPE enabling “real-life learning?”

Distinguished Educators: Distinctive Pedagogies and Programmatic Excellence

Date: February 24, 2016
Attendance: 25

The recipients of the 2016 Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship and 2015 CASE Nebraska Professor of the Year awards--Jennifer Furze, Ph.D., of the Department of Physical Therapy and Jeffrey Hause, Ph.D., of the Departments of Classical and Near Eastern Studies and Philosophy respectively--exhibit a career of distinctive pedagogies and innovative programmatic designs that have impacted their students’ learning and the broader, disciplinary community.

You are invited to join in a campus conversation as they describe their current practices and address such questions as:

- How can faculty harness their individual pedagogies and curricular practices to collaborate with others and/or “impact” educational programs and, even, national standards?
- How have your students directly and indirectly influenced your teaching as scholarship; in other words, what and how have your students “taught” you?
- Looking forward, how can Creighton University build upon its Jesuit pedagogical tradition to ensure distinctive educational programs that ensure students’ academic success and professional excellence?

Celebrating Teaching Excellence: Creativity and Engagement Foundational to Student Success

Date: March 4, 2015
Attendance: 39

The recipients of the 2015 Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship Award, Noam Ebner, L.L.M., and David Reed, Ph.D., exhibit a career filled with creativity in programmatic designs as well as a tradition of student engagement.

You are invited to join in a campus conversation as they address such questions as:

- How can faculty retain their creativity, model creativity for their students, and/or learn from the creativity of their students?
- In the age of rapidly changing technologies, what advice do you offer to ensure our students remain engaged with their learning?
- Looking forward, how can Creighton University build upon its Jesuit pedagogical tradition to ensure student success in the 21st century?

Distinguished Educator Award Luncheon Celebrating Teaching Excellence: Honoring our Jesuit Values

Date: February 19, 2014
Attendance: 53

Naser Alsharif, Ph.D., Pharm.D., Professor and Gintaras Duda, Ph.D., Physics, Associate Professor, inaugural recipients of the Distinguished Educator in Teaching as Scholarship award will facilitate open dialogue and discussion on what contributions of teaching and evidence of a body of work as an Educator Scholar that models best practices in scholarly teaching, clearly communicating the value of teaching as a core enterprise, and that will advance the institutions efforts to be more competitive in state and national teaching award programs.

Distinguished Educator Award: Application Workshop

Date: November 19, 2013
Attendance: 14

This informal workshop is designed to answer questions you may have regarding the application packet, review process, and ways in which educator-scholars elevate our institutional reputation and "best practices."
